Lucien Yedgar Kostov- Lucien loves watching football and thinking about camels. In his spare time he likes reading comics and got inspiration from falling off a camel when he was 6 in Israel. His mum is from Israel and his dad is from Bulgaria.

In the blazing Sahara desert, Jamal and his owner Nusrat walked endlessly through the scorching sands on a journey that felt like an eternity. They were tired, dehydrated and had enough. Nusrat decided to leave Jamal all on his own. Jamal had never felt so sad. Nusrat was on search for water so decided to put himself first and leave Jamal all on his own with no food, no water or anything else.

Although Jamal got left alone, he never gave up! Even when it looked like nobody was ever going to come, he didn't let his smile drop. One fateful April day, a young man named Ayaan found him on his travels and decided to take Jamal on his journey with him! Jamal had never been happier.

At first, Jamal was scared and frightened that he was going to be treated and disrespected in the way that Nusrat had treated him... how he had meanly left him. But Ayaan was nothing like that! He took care of him, gave him food and water and decided to take Jamal on his journey with him. Jamal had never felt more loved

One cold December evening, Jamal and Ayaan were woken with a shout. It sounded very far, but they both knew this was a bad sign that there was someone nearby. They decided to run away, but they were not quick enough! Out of nowhere, Nusrat jumped up, trying to steal Jamal from Ayaan. But, like a true friend, Jamal stood up for himself and chased Nusrat away.

Jamal had felt so tired! He was so tired that it was like nothing he had ever experienced. Both of them knew he would recover eventually, but he couldn't walk or eat or drink or even move. He still felt a sense of relief knowing that Ayaan was beside him staying there for him. it could have taken him forever to recover, but Jamal knew Ayaan would never leave his side because he knew he was a true friend.

It took him two months to fully recover! First he could drink, then he could eat and then finally after what felt like an eternity, he could finally move. Ayaan and Jamal were back on their adventure!

It took what felt like forever - day and night, they were travelling. It felt like time would just not stop, but finally they got to where they had been going. It was a funny place, like nothing he had ever seen! It wasn't especially big or grand or anything, but to Jamal just being with Ayaan was special and priceless. It felt like all of that sadness had vanished.

The two stayed together for their rest of their lives.
